The exhibition was part of a mission to identify and preserve hundreds of medicinal plants in the state. There was a time when inhabitants relied completely on nature for their needs. Nature still provides us with everything essential but man has forgotten and neglected it seeking a substitute. The coming generation must be aware of such things and preserve this knowledge for the future.

Apart from this, it also helps the people in the Ulladan community to make a decent living as this is the only form of livelihood for them. The only thing the Ulladan tribe had was the forest surrounding them and this forced them to depend on nature and generate whatever was necessary from nature. Their knowledge was passed on to generations orally and practically. In this modern era, the members of the Ulladan tribe are those with great knowledge about the available medicinal herbs who provide the herbs and plants required for the ayurvedic treatments.

Ammini, an Ulladan tribal woman, who can identify 4000 types of medicinal plants and herbs was invited to the exhibition. She explained the medicinal value of herbs to the students. Though there are machines to make translation easy it requires the unmitigated skill of the translator as there is increasing interdependence of various disciplines ranging from literature to medicine and mass communication. Keeping this in mind the seminar discussed several thrust areas that are vital for contemporary translation works. The keynote address was by Prof. Devaki Antharjanam where the discussion was about how translation has been influencing a language in its evolution. A special reference to our mother tongue, Malayalam by spotting new style and words in vogue was also a highlight of her talk. In addition, the talk by Dr. M Sherief widened our perspectives on translation in Malayalam. New and less explored areas were revealed through the paper presented by Prof. C S Jayaram with regard to translation in culture, politics and film. In the next session, Dr. R Sukumaran, delivered a special talk on the influence of translation on Hindi, Sujith Sudhakar, from Keltron IMT addressed the gathering on scope and challenges in the area of medical transcription. The two day seminar was an enlightening one in this rather unexplored, yet important area in the overall fabric of the languages that were discussed.

✓ Pension scheme for three families:

Our society and country has blessed us with an identity and sense of belongingness. It is our prime duty to pay back to the society whenever possible. ‘Life Long Pension Scheme' exemplifies this ideal. A teacher must be role model for the students. This practice initiated by the teachers has the goal of creating awareness among our students on moral values and social commitment. The Institution aims at inculcating a feeling of 'Give and share' relationship among student community.

Al-Ameen College, Edathala is located in a rural area which is socially and economically backward. The socio economic status of people living in this area was seen to be below average. Hence, the teaching staff of the Institution put forward the idea of implementing a system of monetary aid to those members of the society who sorely needed it. To ensure that this aid would not peter out, it was decided at the beginning to make it a 'lifelong pension' where the beneficiary could be assured of receiving it until his or her last breath. The aid of the Edathala Panchayath authorities were sought to identify the beneficiaries and the 'Life Long Pension Scheme' came into practice.

Staff Association collects the requisite contribution every month from each willing member. At present the selected needy receive Rs. 1000 per month.
